SUITE

Inhabiting a moment of passage.

Suite is a performance that explores the time of the present, that brief space in which life happens before it becomes memory.

SYNOPSIS

In music, a suite (from the French for “sequence”) is a composition made up of a series of pieces. The term also refers to a particular type of hotel room: a private space inhabited for a limited time, in transit between what came before and what comes next.

Suite emerges from this double meaning: a score composed of fragments, in which eight performers move through situations, encounters and transformations, weaving movement and sound.

A subtle tension runs through the performance: something happens, but its meaning remains suspended. A mystery that leaves room for feeling and recognition.

THE COLLECTIVE

CLUB ALIENO

Club Alieno is an Italian artistic collective founded by dancers and choreographers Valeria Fiorini and Eleonora Gennari. Its research weaves together contemporary dance, electronic music, light, space and performance, in dialogue with the work of lighting designer Antonio Rinaldi and original electronic compositions by KINO.

The collective explores a poetics of plurality, bringing together artists and performers with different bodies, experiences and languages. This heterogeneity is not a theme to be represented, but a generative principle that guides artistic creation and opens up new forms of relationship.
